SPAVINAW CITY'S ONLY WATER HOPE

Growth of Tulsa De-pends Upon Getting Supply.

IS REASON FOR BONDS FIFTY REBELS KILLED

Leading Citizens Tell of Urgency to Meet the Future Demands.

LABOR WANTS NEW SOURCE

Judge Warren Speaks for Workingmen; Others Talk at Meeting.

No city ever prospered until it finally settled its water problem. Tulsa has an inadequate and impure water supply and must get an adequate supply of pure water. Until she does this her growth is retarded and when she does she will prosper and the increase in property values alone will be sufficient to pay the cost of the solution.

Mr. Pressy, one of the greatest hydraulic engineers in America, made a study and recommended the Spavinaw project on which the citizens will vote July 10. His report eliminated all other possible sources. It is a question of going to the Spavinaw or staying with the Arkansas.

Any argument about other sources is fruitless unless Pressy's report can be shown to be false or incorrect. The report was published for several months and reliable engineers have checked it and declared it to be correct in every detail. An engineer has discovered a mistake in his report or shown in any way that his recommendation of the Spavinaw project is not accurate in every detail.

Therefore Spavinaw is the only place to which Tulsa can go for an adequate supply of good water.

Tulsa must have good water immediately. That is why the bond issue must pass.

While the anti's were urging the idea of the Spavinaw water bonds, Tulsa is to have an adequate supply of pure cold water, about 100 men representing all classes of the progressive citizenship of Tulsa at the "Greater" Texas and Good Water's headquarters in the Kennedy building and discussed plans whereby the citizens of Tulsa are to be enlightened on the facts of the Spavinaw project and the bond issue.

The men who spoke last night suggested that type of citizenship that would make Tulsa to grow from a village to a city in less than a decade. They were to quote the words of Mr. Maggs, "men with vision and the nerve to meet the crisis that now confronts Tulsa."

Mr. Maggs, who has been a resident of Tulsa for twenty years, told how Tulsa has grown by the spirit of progress and emergency when cast upon—feared and with faith in its future.

No Hesitation 10 Years Ago.

"Years ago," said Mr. Maggs, "when the city's assessed valuation was less than a tenth of what it is now, there was no hesitancy to meet that figure. In fact, there was more than a desire to meet that figure. It was in the early days when we were few, too, and afraid of the bond issue. Such a spirit did not build Tulsa and it will not make us do so now."

The Spavinaw water is pure and safe without poisonous vegetables and not necessarily accumulative, an unquoted source said. Mr. Maggs, in his speech of reserves, was very anxious to emphasize the necessity of water and let it flow out in order to kill the poisonous under-water vegetation that accumulates in streams and ditches.

With the Spavinaw project all the water will be taken from the flowing creek. The only purpose of the proposed water pumping station, Alton, will be pumping and therefore service, and free, from wastes and other contamination.

Concerns Exchanged. A Brooklyn expanded argument of the opponents of the bond issue is that it is only the richers who can afford to buy water and that the proposed new water tanking water does

REAL STRENGTH

These are days when cities are noisy. There are days when cities are gray. There are days when cities are quiet. There seem to lead us on our way. Then the winds come to gather, and the clouds and leaves arise. And the winds and leaves are here. Oh, it is a day of great suspense, and it is a day you must depend on your faith, and above all, on God.

EL PASO, June 16.—American troops that participated in the punitive expedition against the Villa rebels in and near Juarez last night and today were billeted in barracks and camps on the American side to-night and today were billeted in barracks and camps on the American side tonight and were sent across the border after their 24 hours of campaigning.

As a rearguard to the cavalry, artillery and engineer columns seven hundred high-hatted Mexican prisoners were herded toward the Fort Bliss stockade by a detachment of the 10th Cavalry. An cavalry detachment drove a herd of 100 Mexican horses and ponies captured from the Villa forces to the remount station.

It was unofficially stated tonight at Fort Bliss that approximately 500 Villa followers were killed and a number of prisoners, horses and mules captured.

American Shot.

One American, in the seventh cavalry, Captain Clegg, was shot through the lung by a Mexican rebel on the south bank of the river.

After crossing during the night, the cavalry column, supported by battalion of the 2nd artillery, advanced and at daybreak started southward of Yelapa, Texas. Capturing the seven prisoners before reaching the border, the column continued to within a short distance of the adobe headquarters when fighting was begun by the Americans standing in water up to their knees according to cavalry officers. Four Villa men were killed in the first assault and the entire force numbering approximately 200 men dismounted and escaped toward the southwest.

Mr. James J. Horan, fifth cavalry, pursued one band which continued toward the south west for a distance of 25 miles before returning toward the river.

Killed Rebels.

Captain Tompkins' seventh cavalry in temporary command of Colonel Howard B. Hickok, pursued another band. Troops A and C of the seventh cavalry, executed a mounted pistol charge and killed a number of the rebels. The artillery placed sharpshells directly over the heads of the fleeing Villa force and many were killed. After the two cavalry forces had pursued the rebels over more than 50 square miles, they were within sight of the Villa pursuit. Officers of the Villa pursuit, officers of the artillery had eighth weight guns who threw a portion bridge across the river.

The cavalry, artillery and engineers presented a tired, sulky and strained-stained appearance when they marched over the Mesa to Fort Bliss tonight. Many had evidence of the Villa pursuit, officers of the Villa pursuit, officers of the artillery had eighth weight guns who threw a portion bridge across the river.

ANGELS AND VILLA MOVE FROM YANKS.

By the Associated Press.

IN THIS FIELD WITH GENERAL ANGELS. Mexico, June 16.—At 5 o'clock this morning General Felipe Angeles reached a corner at his headquarters 12 miles northeast of Juarez with the message that General Diaz troops had crossed the Rio Grande into Mexico to intercept the Pan American expeditionary force.

Immediately the Angels started breaking camp and moving south with a little to the west. They arrived later at General Felipe Angeles' quarters in command of 4000 men. The general thereupon who was responsible for the movement, also broke camp and moved south.

The news that American troops had crossed the Mexican territory appeared a set dagger threat to General Angeles. Although many leading and famous persons had spoken of General Angeles' boldness as a personal friend of the Carranza government force and the revolutionaries force,
